

Prin. What saist thou, Mistris quickly? how does thy husband? I loue him well, he is an honest man.

Hof. Good my Lord, heare me.

Fal. Prethee let her alone, and list to mee.

Prin. What saist thou, Iacke?

Fal. The other night I fell asleepe here behind the Arras, and had my pocket pick't, this house is turnde bawdy-house, they picke pockers.

Prin. What didst thou lose, Iacke?

Fal. Wilt thou beleue me, Hal? three or foure bonds of forty pounds apeece, and a seale Ring of my grandfathers.

Prin. A trifle, some eight penny matter.

Hof. So I told him, my Lord, and I said, I heard your Grace say so: and, my Lord, hee speakes most vilely of you, like a foule-mouth'd man, as he is, and said, he would cudgell you.

Prin. What he did not?

Hof. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee, then a stued Prune; nor no more truth in thee, then in a drawne Fox: and for womanhood, Mayd-marian may be the Deputies wife of the Ward to thee, Goe you thing, goe.

Hof. Say, what thing, what thing?

Fal. What thing? why, a thing to thanke God on.

Hof. I am no thing to thanke God on, I would thou shouldst know it: I am an honest mans wife, and setting thy Knight-hood aside, thou art a knaue, to call mee so.

Fal. Setting thy Woman-hood aside, thou art a beast, to say other wise.

Hof. Say, what beast, thou knaue, thou?

Fal. What beast? why an Otter.

Prin. An Otter, Sir Iohn? why an Otter?

Fal. Why? thee's neither fish nor flesh; a man knowes not where to haue her.

Hof. Thou art an yniust man in saying so; thou, or any man knowes where to haue me, thou knaue thou.

Prin. Thou sayest true, Hofesse, and her flanders thee most grosely.

Hof. So hee doth you, my Lord, and said this other day,
You

You ought him a thousand pound

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal? a Million: thou owest me thy loue.

Hof. Nay, my Lord, he called you cudgell you.

Fal. Did I, Bardoll?

Bar. Indeed, Sir Iohn; you sayd so

Fal. Yea, if he sayd my Ring was
